

John Pierre

John Pierre is Vice President of Professional Touch, a consulting firm that provides administrative solutions to business management challenges.

John brings to the organization over 35 years experience in customer service, international and domestic marketing and sales, and administration of business practices.

John's outstanding interpersonal skills and strong sense of humor enhances his ability to creatively problem-solve, think strategically and develop solid professional relationships. His strong background in business has contributed to Professional Touch's development as one of the premier support specialists in San Diego County.

In addition to providing administrative support to organizations, start-ups, consultants, independent contractors and small businesses, John has supported over 25 mayoral, congressional, city council, gubernatorial and presidential political campaigns on the local, state and national level.

John's core value is to bring honesty and integrity to all elements of his business interactions, and he gains his greatest satisfaction from the development of trust between he and the client.

John was educated at Palomar College and San Diego State University and holds a degree in Business Administration. He has taken extensive professional courses to enhance his knowledge of business procedures and programs, and has been an active member of business organizations in San Diego, including serving on the Board of Directors for the World Trade Association. John currently resides with his wife and business partner Barbara in North San Diego County.
